A Fall Fire Safety Reminder

By Jibreel Jalloh

On Tuesday, September 15th, three families in Canarsie lost the safety and stability of home in a matter of minutes. A two-alarm fire on East 80th Street spread through a residential building and into an adjoining property, leaving three families displaced.

Thankfully, no lives were lost, but the aftermath of a fire can still upend a family's life. Suddenly, people are figuring out where they will sleep, how they will replace clothing and essential belongings and how they will begin rebuilding a sense of normalcy.

One of the families affected, the Voltaire family, has since launched a GoFundMe to help with temporary housing, food, transportation and replacing essential belongings. A widowed mother, her three children and her young grandchild were displaced. Their story offers a window into what recovery looks like, while reminding us that they are only one of three families navigating the aftermath of this fire. Those who are able to support them can find the fundraiser on GoFundMe by searching "Help the Voltaire Family Rebuild." As a community, we should keep all of the families affected in our prayers and support them where we can.

Their experience should also serve as a reminder as colder weather approaches. Soon, families across Brooklyn will turn on their heat and bring space heaters out of storage. Keep space heaters at least three feet away from anything that can burn, including curtains, bedding, furniture and clothing. Plug them directly into a wall outlet rather than an extension cord or power strip, and turn them off before leaving a room or going to sleep.

Electrical safety matters too. Do not overload outlets and pay attention to warning signs such as scorch marks, flickering lights, buzzing sounds or burning smells. Extension cords should be a temporary solution, not a substitute for proper wiring.

Most importantly, make sure your home has working smoke and carbon monoxide alarms. The FDNY recommends alarms where people sleep and on every level of the home, including basements. Families should also know how they will get out in an emergency and keep doors, windows and other exits clear. A properly rated fire extinguisher may also be useful to keep in the house. If a fire is spreading or smoke is building, get out, stay out and call 911.

We should also always celebrate and support the firefighters, emergency medical services personnel and other first responders who answer these calls without knowing the families inside. They simply know someone needs help, and they respond. The families displaced on East 80th Street now face a long road back. We can support them where opportunities are available, while also taking a few minutes to make our own homes safer.

Test your alarms, check your outlets, use heaters carefully, keep exits clear and talk with your family. Fire safety is not about fear. It is about preparation and protecting the people we love.

Salt Marsh Alliance Hosts 'Stingers!' Event

By Angela G. Nannetti

The Salt Marsh Alliance has been known to offer a variety of unique and interesting programs to the community, but its latest installment – a master class on “Stingers!” and the insects that use them – was quite the unexpected treat.

Insect enthusiasts, home gardeners and nature lovers alike gathered at the Salt Marsh Nature Center, located at 3301 Avenue U, on Sunday, September 13th, for a presentation by Long Island Aquarium Entomologist Alison Coffey.

Attendees learned about Western

Honey Bees, Common Eastern Bumble Bees, Alfalfa Leafcutter Bees, North American Carpenter Bees, Blue Winged Wasps, Bald Faced Hornets, Northern Paper Wasps, Eastern Yellow Jackets and more. It may be hard to believe, but there are more than 400 species of bees in New York State, and many are becoming increasingly scarce due to habitat destruction.

The group learned to identify some of the most common bees and wasps and received helpful tips on creating bee habitats and planting pollinator gardens.

Recalling the Canarsie of My Childhood

By Gary Shulman, MS. Ed.

Young Canarsie kids marveling at each caught stinky fish

The Canarsie and Seaview Theaters
Seaview Park on a sunny warm day
Officer Sledge Playground on East 95th Street
Creative children enthralled in technology-free play

Let's not forget those smoke-filled Mahjong games
With Entenmann's for all to enjoy!
Crew cut sons just like me ready to pounce

If we promised our parents not to annoy
P.S. 114, 115, 272, 276 and 279
For our futures they nourished our developing brains
All with the very best teachers
Then off to Junior High School 211 to continue making academic gains

Oh, how I remember those field days!
When I close my eyes those precious days still make me sigh
More memories I could share and ponder
Of joy-filled Leave it to Beaver days gone by

They fed our souls with seeds of everlasting delight
Those fond Canarsie recollections of our youth
Canarsie taught us to enjoy the small pleasures in life
And to this day that remains a monumental truth

Gary Shulman has spent a lifetime supporting vulnerable families and children. He began his career working with children with and without disabilities in an inclusive Head Start program in Brooklyn and transitioned to become the special needs and early childhood coordinator for the Brooklyn Children's Museum for 10 years.
For over 24 years, he passionately advocated for the needs of these parents as the social services and training director for Resources for Children with Special Needs, Inc. in New York City.
The last years of his working life, he served as a private special needs consultant, conducting hundreds of training sessions throughout New York City and beyond to help parents and professionals find and access the services and systems required to facilitate maximizing the potential of their children with disabilities.
Now retired in Arlington, VA, but still supporting vulnerable families serving as an advisory commissioner for the Partnership for Children, Youth and Families, Gary continues his workshop presentations and now also enjoys sharing his poetry that he passionately writes with the goal of leaving this world a better place one word at a time.

Canarsie Historical Society Looking for Information on Van Houten's Grocery Store

Editor's Note:

The following article is a reprint of a story that was published in The Brooklyn Citizen on October 31, 1891, and refers to a fire which destroyed Van Houten's Grocery Store, which was located on the lower level of the Smith Building on Conklin Avenue.

Canarsie Historical Society President Ira M. Kluger is trying to determine the exact location of the Smith Building on Conklin Avenue. If any of our readers have this information, please email us at canarsiec@aol.com or give us a call at 718-257-0600. We appreciate any information or knowledge that our readers might have on this old Canarsie business.

LIFE LOST AT A FIRE

CARMAN WENT INTO THE BURNING BUILDING TO SAVE FURNITURE

His Body Found in a Pile of Rubbish. Three Buildings Destroyed at Canarsie at 11 o'clock Today — the Loss Estimated at Nearly $9,000.

Joel Carman, a well-known resident of Canarsie, lost his life in a fire in that place this morning. The fire broke out in Van Houten's grocery store on Conklin Avenue at 11 o'clock. The store occupies the lower floor of the Smith Building. Mr. Van Houten was waiting on customers when a kerosene lamp in the rear exploded. He turned to the spot and discovered that the flames had already reached the oil tank. He was afraid this, too, would explode, and ran out of the store and gave the alarm.

The flames had spread and were beyond control when the firemen arrived. They concentrated their efforts on the upper part of the house, which was occupied by several families, and succeeded in rescuing all the inmates.

The heat was intense, and the firemen could not enter the building, which was a frame structure. Joel Carman, a well-known resident of the town was one of the first to reach the fire. He entered the upper part of the building to save the furniture. He was seen to throw out furniture for several minutes, and then he disappeared, amid a cry of horror from the crowd below.

The fire spread to the residences of John Reid, a driver for the Knickerbocker Ice Company, which adjoins the Smith Building, and his home and furniture were soon in ruins. The firemen worked untiringly, but their efforts were futile, as the buildings were destroyed.

George Hendrickson, the Democratic nominee for Constable, and Grocer Van Houten and his son, who was lately married, lost all their furniture, which was not insured.

As soon as it was at all safe to do so searching parties began to look for the body of Carman. They explored the ruined building, but could not find him. Mr. Hendrickson, while going to the barn in the rear of the burned building, stumbled over Carman's body. It lay buried in a pile of rubbish. He summoned aid, and a doctor was sent for. The latter examined the body and pronounced life extinct. He said that the man had been suffocated.

Carman's wife, who was present, was distracted at her loss, and her agony was heartrending. She threw herself over her husband's body and refused to leave it. It took the united efforts of four men to take her away.

Carman leaves five small children and his wife is in destitute circumstances. The damage caused by the fire is estimated as between $8,000 and $9,000.

Assemblywoman Jaime Williams Presents New Patrol Cars to Three Precincts

After eight years of securing funding to purchase new vehicles for the 61st, 63rd and 69th Police Precincts, Assemblywoman Jaime Williams is pleased to announce that three state-of-the-art vehicles have arrived in our community and are now in service. Public safety remains a major priority and ensuring that both police officers and auxiliary officers have the resources they need is essential. These new vehicles — equipped with advanced technology, including license plate readers — will significantly enhance our officers' ability to do their jobs effectively and keep our neighborhoods safe.

Williams said the new license plate reader-equipped vehicles are the result of a project that began in 2018 and took years to reach completion, noting that the 63rd Precinct was the first to receive one, followed by the 69th and 61st Precincts. "It takes a long time to get these things done, but they do make a difference in our community and assist the NYPD," Williams said.

Deputy Inspector Joseph Antonio, commanding officer of the 61st Precinct, said that they were very grateful to Williams. "This vehicle will last a long time," he said.

"We thank the assemblywoman for always stepping up to help the NYPD and standing for public safety," 61st Precinct Community Council member and Community Board 15 Chairwoman Theresa Scavo said.

"This vehicle will be a valuable resource for our officers as they serve the Canarsie community. We appreciate the investment in the 69th Precinct and what it means for our work," Captain Sashanna Wynter, commanding officer of the 69th Precinct, told the Canarsie Courier. "A special thank you to Assembly Member Jaime Williams and her team for their support."

Gravesend Crew Takes Over Avenue U Ahead of Season 3 Premiere

By Robert Pearl

The final countdown to the highly anticipated Gravesend Season Three, Part One just dropped on Prime Video on Friday, September 25th. One week prior, on Friday, September 18th, the cast and crew of the popular crime drama gathered at Downtown Clothing on Avenue U for a special pre-season three pop-up celebration.

The event at 2502 Avenue U gave fans an opportunity to meet members of the cast, take photographs, get autographs and check out the latest Brooklyn Brand and Gravesend merchandise. The Brooklyn Brand clothing line is owned and was created by Gravesend creator, writer, director and star William DeMeo, making Downtown Clothing a natural setting for the celebration.

DeMeo welcomed fans to the store and talked about the upcoming Season Three premiere, telling the crowd that he and other actors were there to celebrate the Brooklyn roots of Gravesend, with the evening bringing together the music, food, 1980s nostalgia and neighborhood camaraderie that have become part of the show's identity. "Tonight's going to be a great night," DeMeo said in his message to fans.

Joining DeMeo at the event were members of the Gravesend cast and production family, including Cristian "Cris" DeMeo, Peter Gaudio, Johnny Oliva, Big Time Tommie Romola and Adam Actions. Producer Michele Frantzeskos, who is part of the show's production team, was also part of the season three celebration. Resuming their character roles are Gaudio as Rocco Giordano and Oliva as Paulie "The Prince" Tremaldo, while Cristian DeMeo plays Sammy Taramino.

DeMeo took time during the evening to spotlight several of the actors, calling Gaudio someone with whom he "started together." He also praised Oliva, noting that he plays Chazz Palminteri's son, and shout out to Adam Actions, telling the crowd that the young actors featured in Season Three would shine and are the future. "Wait till you see what these guys do in Season Three," DeMeo said.

Set in Brooklyn's organized crime world of the 1980s, Gravesend follows Benny Zerletta, played by DeMeo, as he navigates family, loyalty and the dangerous world surrounding the Colezzo crime family. The independently produced series has developed a sizable ensemble of recognizable actors and personalities, helping give the production its distinctly Brooklyn flavor.

Season Three expands that cast considerably. Among the returning and featured names are Armand Assante, Chazz Palminteri, Chuck Zito, Tony Darrow, Mario Cantone, Bo Dietl and Sid Rosenberg, while new additions include Tony Danza, Talia Shire, Dominic Chianese and Vincent Curatola. Shaquille O'Neal also joins the series as Mustafa, a powerful crime boss overseeing operations in Bedford-Stuyvesant.

The Avenue U celebration was more than a television launch. It was a neighborhood event, with DJ Ross the Boss providing the soundtrack and local food sponsors helping feed the crowd – Dario's supplied pizza, while Brennan and Carr provided its signature roast beef. DeMeo specifically thanked both businesses and the fans who came out to support the cast and crew.

With the first six episodes of Season Three, Part One streaming on Prime Video, the Downtown Clothing gathering gave Brooklyn fans a chance to celebrate with the people behind the series before the next chapter officially begins.

Downtown carries DeMeo's signature label, Brooklyn Brand, where like the series, the apparel line features the motto, "If you're from Brooklyn, then Brooklyn is your brand." Get your popcorn ready.

Marine Park

Spreading Esophageal Cancer Awareness

By Brian Moreno

Small in size but large in spirit, attendees gathered in Marine Park on Saturday morning, September 19th, at the corner of East 33rd Street and Avenue S, to attend the 8th annual Brooklyn/NYC Esophageal Cancer Awareness Day Event (ECADE).

Organized by Dara Mormile in collaboration with the volunteer-based organization, EC Aware, and Amy Collins of Harvesting Hope Mail, this year's ECADE focused on a smaller mission to raise awareness of esophageal cancer (EC) among people who may not have any connection to it or may not know much about its signs, symptoms and the dangers of this lesser-known digestive disease. Collins lost her brother to EC in 2022.

The American Cancer Society estimates that in 2026 about 22,530 new cases of EC will be diagnosed, and there will be an estimated 16,290 deaths from this disease in the United States. With no mandated screenings and no early detection tools, patients often find themselves having to fight for an endoscopy and advocating for their own health – and by the time they have a scope, the cancer is discovered in later stages.

"Even though this year's event is a lower scale, it's still about bringing awareness to the community," Mormile said. "Due to organization shifts, I am going to reshape my ongoing mission to honor my father Joseph Mormile's memory. He lost his battle to EC in 2010 after fighting it for two years. We never knew EC was a disease. I'm now pursuing a partnership with ECAN (Esophageal Cancer Action Network) to continue advocacy efforts that extend beyond just an annual event."

ECAN is the nation's prominent nonprofit organization dedicated to EC. Its mission focuses on early cancer detection, cancer trials, supporting research, funding and raising awareness about the link between chronic reflux, indigestion, heartburn and EC. ECAN launched the campaign for Joseph Mormile over the weekend and is currently welcoming donations.

Key statistics about EC are that it is more common among men than women; risk factors for EC include using tobacco, drinking alcohol and having excess body weight. Studies also show there is a connection between EC and gastroesophageal reflux disease.

Those who stopped by the event were happy to support the cause.

"We've been friends with Dara for many years," Howard Steinhart said. "I fully support her efforts to fight EC, the same way she supported me when I was battling prostate cancer. It's small today, but she's had very big events, and I'm very proud of her for all the effort she put into this."

Although this year's event wasn't focused on a 5K run/walk, residents still gathered for resources often unavailable to the public outside a doctor's office.

"I'm glad we came out today to raise awareness in my father's honor," Mormile said. "It's great that the community comes out to support advocacy efforts. Some residents even shared their own experiences of imploring their doctors to provide endoscopies early to treat digestive symptoms that could have been deadly. Now that I'm joining forces with ECAN as a volunteer, I'm looking forward to steering my advocacy efforts in a different – but still rewarding – direction."

Can Carnival Survive the Labor Day Parade?

Soca superstar Kees Dieffenthaler, an honorary grand marshal of the 59th annual West Indian American Day Carnival and Parade, addresses an enthusiastic crowd at a VIP breakfast on September 7th.

By Roger French

On Monday, September 7th, the West Indian American Day Carnival Association (WIADCA) held the 59th annual West Indian American Day Carnival and Parade on Eastern Parkway in Brooklyn. But throughout the city's West Indian American community, and among social media content producers, there was ambivalence regarding whether the parade would be canceled.

That, in part, was due to the fact that organizers of a promoted Trinidad and Tobago parade were denied an NYPD permit to allow the event to go forward mere weeks before the Labor Day parade. The feelings of uncertainty also hinged on the parade's reputation for gunplay and other violence — as well as a belief among some that real estate developers and new neighborhood transplants were behind machinations to end the parade and fuel gentrification.

This year, the parade started on another high note with its traditional early-morning VIP breakfast held to kick off the parade. Guests included soca superstar Kees Dieffenthaler, of Kes the Band, who, along with dancehall superstar Buju Banton, served as co-grand marshals of the parade. Top elected officials included Governor Kathy Hochul, House Minority Leader Hakeem Jeffries, Senate Minority Leader Chuck Schumer, Attorney General Letitia James, Public Advocate Jumaane Williams, Councilwoman of District 46 Mercedes Narcisse and Mayor Zohran Mamdani, among others.

Still, all the revelry and praise for the city's Caribbean community shown by the top politicians — along with the fan-frenzy shown Dieffenthaler and Banton as they walked along the Parkway, and intermittently mounted booming music trucks where they waved their Trini and Jamaican flags — couldn't prevent the festivities from seeing a spate of reported stabbings and gun violence in close proximity to the parade.

These acts of violence could not have occurred at a worse time for a parade that was already in flux. Everyone — from seasoned volunteers in the offices of WIADCA to mas band leaders on social media and radio airwaves — remarked in concert about a lack of funding necessary to produce events leading up to the Labor Day finale. Also adding to this austere tone was NYPD Commissioner Jessica Tisch who, at a press briefing four days prior, stated that the parade would end 30 minutes sooner, at 5:30 p.m. Some parade-goers who had long attended the costumed-filled spectacle over generations also noted on social media how much less festive the Parkway seemed on Labor Day weekend than in recent years.

Curtis Nelson, who heads Sesame Flyers, the biggest mas band in the parade, also voiced apprehension about bringing his band back out on Eastern Parkway in 2027. "Trucks can cost anywhere from $50,000 on up to $100,000, depending on how equipped one wants to be," Nelson said to Dahved Levy, host of Caribbean Fever on WBLS Radio, on a Sunday, September 13th airing of the program. The band leader also spoke of the expense of producing costumes for band participants and the frustration of seeing mobs of parade-goers who tend to storm mas bands without wearing appropriate costumes.

Should Nelson make good on his threat of not committing Sesame Flyers to the Labor Day parade in 2027 unless sponsorships and other community support mechanisms fall into place, this could prove a major blow to WIADCA and a million spectators and revelers. Still, with the organization having long billed itself as a carnival and a parade, the latter may likely survive for the benefit of elected officials who need to engage tens of thousands of registered voters.
